

Katia Vladimirova is a senior researcher working on the topics of fashion consumption and sustainability from the point of view of sufficiency and degrowth. She is a founder of the International Research Network on Sustainable Fashion Consumption. Dr. Vladimirova has published on the topics of minimalism and sufficiency in fashion consumption practices. She is also a co-author of the recent report: Unfit, Unfair, Unfashionable: Resizing Fashion for a Fair Consumption Space by Hot or Cool

Institute, which identifies sufficiency levels for the global fashion system.